Summary of Changes

Assessments

We will continue to assess students through a combination of written coursework and online exams. Specific assessment plans will be available by the start of each module.

Assessments that usually take place in-person, for small groups or individuals e.g. oral exams and group presentations, are expected to take place in-person throughout 2021-22 (in both teaching scenarios, that is, with and without social distancing). However, for LFA groups which are taught wholly online, the oral exam will take place online also.

Programme Structures

Undergraduate students will continue to have all the same core modules available on all programmes, with a wide variety of option modules offered in second and final year.

- Available module options for 2021-22 were announced in April.
- Two final year option modules have been cancelled because only a very small number of students expressed interest in taking them.
- No further changes to the range of modules offered are anticipated.

All postgraduate core and option modules are expected to run as planned.
